The Employment Status Survey is a statistical inquiry aiming at revealing the employment characteristics of the population in Japan. This is a sample survey, which is statistically designed to enumerate a part of the total population. The selection of the population is made in terms of households on the basis of the statistical procedure. Your household is selected as one of the sample households.

You are earnestly requested to fill out this Household Schedule and the Individual Schedule which is separately distributed.

The statistical law, on which this survey is based, prohibits the use of the information supplied by you for purposes other than strictly statistical.
